

Kevin Humphries MP

Minister for Natural Resources, Lands and Water

Minister for Western NSW

---

MEDIA RELEASE

---

Friday 5 September

NEW INLAND WATERS PARKS WEBSITE LAUNCHED

A new website to promote the State's nine inland waters holiday parks to tourists across Australia and the world was today launched by the Minister for Natural Resources, Lands and Water Kevin Humphries.

Mr Humphries said the website - www.inlandwaters.com.au – marked the first time holiday makers will be able to access information about the State's nine unique inland holiday parks.

“The State's inland waters holiday parks such as Lake Burrendong and Lake Keepit are enjoyed by hundreds and thousands of people each year and are a critical part of local and regional visitor economies,” Mr Humphries said.

“The Inland Waters Holiday Parks have long been favourite family holiday destinations for tourists from right across Australia.

“The NSW Crown Holiday Parks Trust has been working hard to improve existing facilities and this new website is a great way to promote the revitalisation of these parks.”

NSW Crown Holiday Parks Trust Chair, Alan Revell, said the website provides a gateway for travellers to rediscover much loved holiday and recreation destinations, and helps to promote the depth of tourism experiences available in regional areas.

“The website provides handy tips for first time visitors, information on holiday vans and pet friendly parks,” Mr Revell said.

“The web site is accessible on mobile and tablet devices. You can even browse on the go and make the most of handy features such as travelling distances and location maps.”

The website was developed as a partnership between NSW Crown Lands and the NSW Crown Holidays Parks Trust, bringing together former Inland State Parks under the one managing body. NSW Crown Lands Holiday Parks Trust Board is a new entity that is providing strategic direction for 34 public holiday and recreational parks across the state.

MEDIA: Jeremy Scott - 0467 741 200